1. The Terezin Airfield lies between Terezin (N51/F53) and Litomerice in a triangle formed by the northern outskirts of Terezin, the Ohre River and the Litomerice - Terezin state highway. The latter road forms the western boundary of the airfield; the Ohre River runs along the eastern boundary and then turns west, forming the northern boundary of the field, also.
2. The Terezin airfield is 800 by 1,200 meters in size and has a grass surface. It is 146 meters above sea level and is built on a humus foundation. The runway, running north and south, is sodded and marked off with stones. Drainage from the field is into the Ohre River.
3. The hangars stand in the northeast corner of the field, near the river and close together. There are six hangars made of brick, with semicircular roofs, each 20 or 30 meters long. In front of the hangars there is a small concrete apron.
4. The radio transmitting station is in the administration building. The field is not illuminated.
5. This airfield is used by the Air Force as a training base.
6. Airmen are housed in new five-story barracks in Terezin, on the east side of the Litomerice - Terezin state highway.
